

Notes on sources for Italian heraldry for the ignorant but not-yet-despairing enquirer.

THESE NOTES ON THIS FORMIDABLE SUBJECT WERE FIRST PUT TOGETHER IN 1990 FOR DORA THORNTON, MY SUCCESSOR IN THE DEPT OF MEDIEVAL & LATER ANTIQUITIES (NOW PREHISTORY & EUROPE) OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM. THEY ARE NOT COPYRIGHT AND MAY BE GIVEN TO ANYONE WHO MIGHT FIND THEM OF USE. PLEASE BEAR IN MIND THAT I AM NO MORE THAN AN AMATEUR HERALD. I SHOULD BE GLAD TO BE SENT CORRECTIONS, ADDITIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS, PARTICULARLY INsofar AS THEY RELATE TO SOURCES IN ENGLAND. PLEASE DO NOT PRESUME UNWARRANTABLY ON THE TIME OF INDIVIDUAL SCHOLARS NAMED.

Note: Many of the older Italian works have been reprinted by Arnaldo Forni, Bologna; see their useful catalogue. More recently there are various (expensive) publications, especially reprints of ms stemmari, issued by Orsini De Marzo of Milan. See also the "Araldica" catalogue of the Libreria Chiari in Florence. There are increasing numbers of websites that are helpful, only a few of which I am informed about.

1. Outline guides

J. Goodall, "Heraldry in Italy during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance", Coat of Arms 5 (1958-9), pp. 148-55; 209-12.

"Jalons pour l'étude de l'héraldique: l'héraldique italienne", Archivum Heraldicum 76 (1962), pp. 18-20.

"Araldica" in Enciclopedia italiana.

G. Guelfi Camajani, "Some Sources for Italian Genealogy", Genealogists' Magazine 14 (1962), pp. 66-69.

G. Guelfi Camajani, Genealogy in Italy, Istituto genealogico italiano, Florence 1979 [photocopy in PE library].

G. Bascapè and M. Del Piazzo, Insegne e simboli: araldica pubblica e privata medievale e moderna, Rome 1983, is a full-length modern and scholarly treatise, but unforgivably lacks an index or systematic bibliography.

F. di Montauto, Manuale di araldica, Florence 1999; 2nd ed. 2001 (incorporates the stemmario from Ginanni 1756).

G. Santi-Mazzini, Araldica: storia, linguaggio, simboli e significati dei blasoni e delle arme, Milan 2003.

2. Heraldic-genealogical dictionaries

P. Litta, Celebri famiglie italiane, Milan and Turin 1819-1923 (different sets are bound differently: there is an index to the BL set on the open shelves in the Reading Room). By far the most thorough for the major families it deals with. [See also A.F. Boschetti, I cataloghi dell'opera di Pompeo Litta "Famiglie celebri italiane", 1930. Reprint Forni.] Now, at least in great part, available on Gallica: <http://gallica.bnf.fr/services/engine/search/sru?operation=searchRetrieve&version=1.2&startRecord=0&maximumRecords=15&page=1&collapsing=disabled&query=dc.relation%20all%20%22cb41249636m%22>

G.B. di Crollanza, Dizionario storico-blasonico, Pisa 1886-90; reprint Forni 1977 (the most reliable dictionary).

S. Mannucci, Nobiliario e blasonario del Regno d'Italia, Collegio Araldico, Rome 1925-33.

V. Spreti, Enciclopedia storico-nobiliare, Milan 1928-35 (full entries, but more or less confined to families still extant, whereas Crollanza has defunct ones too) [7 vols; Bod. 2188 d 16].

A.M.G. Scorza, Enciclopedia araldica italiana, Genoa 1953- (incomplete - up to TR published)

L. Tettoni and T. Saladini, Teatro araldico, Lodi and Milan 1841-8 [BL 1861 a 17; V&A 75 V 53-60]. [Gheno 1924 includes an index to this; there is a full index in vol. 8]

3. Bibliographies/genealogical guides

G. Colaneri, Bibliografia araldica e genealogica d'Italia, Rome 1904

V. Spreti and G. Degli Azzi Vitelleschi, Saggio di bibliografia araldica italiana (supplement to Spreti, 1936); contains everything in Colaneri. Reprint Forni. [lost from Bodley, not in V&A or BL; but is in Warburg. TW has a copy.]

A. Gheno, Contributo alla bibliografia genealogica italiana, Rome 1924. Reprint Forni 1971. [V&A. TW has a copy.]

4. Other useful works

G.B. di Crollanza, Enciclopedia araldico-cavalleresca. Prontuario nobiliare, Pisa 1876-7; reprint Forni 1980.

F. Fumi Cambi Gado, Stemmi nel Museo Nazionale del Bargello, Florence 1993. [These are mainly non-Florentine.]

11. For finding ecclesiastical arms:

A convenient place to find the sequence of papal arms is in the Rome volume of the Touring Club Italiano.

G. Sicari, Stemmi cardinalizi (secoli XV-XVII), Monografie Romane dell'Alma Roma 11, Rome 1996. [THW has a copy]

G. Sicari, Blasone e stemmi di nobili domenicani a Roma, Monografie Romane dell'Alma Roma 9, Rome 1994. [THW has a copy]

A. Chacon (Ciaconius), Vitae et Res Gestae Pontificum et S.R.E. Cardinalium; the best edition is the Rome 1677 one. Supplements by A. Guarnacci, 1751, and J.P. de Cinque and R. Fabrinio, 1787. [Duke Humfrey, open shelves, H104] This was the best source for Cardinals' arms until the publication of the convenient Sicari 1996.

O. Panvinio, Epitome Pontificum Romanorum..., Venice 1557.

For arms of some, by no means all, bishops arranged see by see:

F. Ughelli, Italia Sacra, Venice 1717-21 [BL 657 i 1-8; vols 8 and 9 bound together]. An index to the nine volumes is attached. An index of surnames is in vol. 9.

A particularly splendid source on the arms of Renaissance Cardinals is in the Vatican, Ms. Vat. Lat. 3755.

Monsignor Charles Burns in the Archivio Segreto Vaticano is a pleasant and learned man who has on occasion been able to help me with problems of ecclesiastical heraldry; but I do not know if he is still there.

12. Royal heraldry, orders of chivalry, and the like

For reliable ready reference on the arms and basic genealogy of the House of Savoy and some other ruling families, use:

J. Louda and M. Maclagan, Lines of Succession, London 1981, pp. 238-260.

For knights of the Golden Fleece, the most reliable list is in La Toison d'Or. Cinq siècles d'art et d'histoire, exhib. cat., Bruges, 1962. For their arms, see:

J. Maurice, Le blason des armoiries de tous les chevaliers de l'ordre de la Toison d'Or, The Hague 1665 (BL and Ants), though this has no dates and should be used in conjunction with the above. There is also (in Bodley), J. Chiflet [Chiffletius], Insignia gentilitia equitum ordinis Velleris Aurei (1632), but this has only descriptions of arms, not illustrations.

13. Identifying family coats-of-arms

Because there was no central heraldic authority for Renaissance Italy, the whole business was far more chaotic than in England. There is no efficient printed Ordinary of Italian arms comparable to Papworth for England, though Ginanni 1756 is worth looking at. Without an indication of the region of origin, or a mark of ecclesiastical rank, most Italians tend to give up in despair, and even the most expert people are not often successful.

The place to start is the Dept of Mss in the BL, which contains the large manuscript Ordinary made by Sir George Hill, Add. Mss 46809-46820. An efficient index of this was compiled at my instigation by Patricia Collins in 1985; a copy is in the Mss Students' Room. The Hill Ordinary consists of thousands of drawings and illustrations cut from books; a useful list of the books used is in the first box.

An ordinary of Italian arms in the form of a typescript card index, based mainly on Crollalanza, by the late Lez Hough is deposited in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries. TW has a photocopy of this, with the permission of Mr Hough's executor. Further shields of arms are recorded in ordinary form in a series of working ring binders, which Mr Hough was apparently unable to incorporate onto the cards.

In the Vatican is a vast European-wide illustrated Ordinary of arms with many thousand Italian arms known as the Schedario Rangoni Machiavelli. The Vatican authorities do not greatly like making this available and advance notice is essential. There is a card index to this in the catalogue room of the Library and a volume with drawings of the headings under which the charges are arranged at item 206 of the catalogue shelf in the room adjoining the Manuscript room.

Also in the British Library (Add. Mss 31960-31964) is the Ordinary of (non-British) European arms compiled by A.W. Morant. This looks, to my casual eye, stronger in French and German than in Italian arms, but is worth looking at. In the Antiquaries are three volumes of an ordinary of European arms made by Morant by cutting up the main series volumes of Rietstap.

Another important source is the Stemmario Cartari-Febei in the Archivio di Stato di Roma (at the Sapienza). A summary of this by Wendy Watson is attached.

An unillustrated Ordinary of European arms is T. de Renesse, Dictionnaire des figures héraldiques, Brussels 1894-1903. This is, however, diabolically difficult to use unless you are a better herald than I am, except for quite simple shields.

An admirable new resource (found by me in 2005) is the illustrated on-line dictionary of arms in the Biblioteca Estense in Modena, available on <http://www.cedoc.mo.it/estense/info/img/insegne.html> and supplemented by PDFs of some of that great library's armorial manuscripts: <http://www.cedoc.mo.it/estense/info/img/mss.html>

A resource which I have been told about by Marco Ballardini (2018) is the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek [site, \[http://daten.digital-sammlungen.de/~db/bsb00001421/images/index.html?id=00001421&groesser=&fip=qrseayaea_yaeayaenxdsydeayaewqeyawqrs&no=215&seite=1\]\(http://daten.digital-sammlungen.de/~db/bsb00001421/images/index.html?id=00001421&groesser=&fip=qrseayaea_yaeayaenxdsydeayaewqeyawqrs&no=215&seite=1\)](http://daten.digital-sammlungen.de/~db/bsb00001421/images/index.html?id=00001421&groesser=&fip=qrseayaea_yaeayaenxdsydeayaewqeyawqrs&no=215&seite=1)

Where there are armorials for Venice (starts image 7), Mantua (starts image 201), Bologna (starts image 307), Ancona (starts image 439), and Urbino (starts image 497).

Beyond this, and though an increasing number of heraldic resources are appearing free on line, the only thing to be done with an Italian coat-of-arms if you do not know the region is to look through the general illustrated armorials in the hope of spotting it. This is needle in a haystack stuff, but one option is a visit to the Collegio Araldico, Via S. Maria dell'Anima 16, 00186 Rome. The opening hours of the Collegio, which has a fine specialist heraldic library and publishes the Libro d'oro della nobiltà italiana, were in 1984 Thursday evenings 5.00 - 7.30 p.m., but no regular opening hours are now (2011) given on the Collegio website. The two illustrated armorials I looked at there are by Mattei (about 6.000 shields) and Mercandetti (about 30,000 shields). More widely, of course, there are the illustration volumes by Rolland to Rietstap's Armorial général, covering all Europe (the supplements to Rietstap have integral illustrations). The text of Rietstap is available free on line at www.euraldic.com

Many of the current arms of Italian municipalities are put at the start of their entries in the red TCI Guides.

You have a more realistic chance of tracking down a shield if you know the city or region it comes from, though even then the chances are in my experience - unless it is in Hill - not very good. The following are some of the more useful local armorial sources. Many of the local armorials are not in the BL; some may be in the V & A or the Society of Antiquaries. BL and other shelfmarks are given when I happen to have them.

Alessandria:

U. de Ferrari di Brignano, Stemmi di famiglie alessandrine 1919. [reprint Forni] [unillustrated]

Faenza:

Printed shields on Pianta della Città, e Borgo DI FAENZA, Dedicata Al Reverendissimo Padre Maestro Francesco Ottavio de'Orestis Inquisitore di Faenza, e di tutta la Romagna Da Carlo Cesare Scaletti, n.d.

There are also three ms. armorials in the Biblioteca Comunale, Faenza: Calzi, Baccarini, and Tassinari. These do not inspire confidence. More useful is the following:

La Colonia Esperide Faentina dell'Insigne Universale Istituto Albriziano di Scienze ed Arti Liberali, a large engraved plate of arms on the wall in the reference room of the Biblioteca Comunale in Faenza. It was described and analysed, but not reproduced, by G. Ballardini in a series of articles in Romagna 1905, anno 4-5, fasc. 6-7. I owe to Marco Ballardini (2017) the information that this is now available on http://manfrediana.comune.faenza.ra.it/contenuto/Mappe_carte_geografiche/Colonia_Esperide/Colonia_Esperide_Tav.1/imageset.html (and through to tav. 6).

Fano:

Drawings of armorials from Biblioteca Oliveriana, Pesaro, ms. 1341, reproduced by G. Patrignani, "Fano e i fanesi nei manoscritti della Biblioteca Oliveriana di Pesaro", Quaderni dell'Accademia Fanestre 2 (2003), pp. 185-204.

B. Borgarucci (ed. by A. Deli), Istoria della nobiltà di Fano, Quaderni di Nuovi studi fanesi, Biblioteca Comunale Federiciana, Fano, 1994 (no illustrations).

[I owe my knowledge and copies of both these works to Claudio Paolinelli]

Ferrara:

A. Maresti, Teatro Genealogico et Istorico Dell'Antiche, & Illustri Famiglie di

Ferrara..., Ferrara 1678-1708 [reprint Forni 1973; apparently only A-F]

D. Tiribilli Giuliani, Sommario storico delle famiglie celebri toscane, Florence 1855-64.

BL, Mss Add. 16,612; Eg. 1170; and others.

There are good armorial card indexes of Florentine/Tuscan arms in the Kunsthistorisches Institut, the Biblioteca degli Uffizi, and the Archivio di Stato, Florence. If all else fails, it is usually also worth asking Marco Spallanzani, but the late great Ulrich Middeldorf is irreplaceable. Luigi Borgia of the Archivio di Stato in Florence is a learned heraldic scholar.

E. Gamurrini, as above.

L. Passerini, Le armi dei municipi toscani, Florence 1864 [BL 9903 e 16]. Version edited by L. Borgia in VAM

P. Marchi (ed.), I blasoni delle famiglie toscane conservati nella raccolta Ceramelli-Papiani, Archivio di Stato di Firenze, Rome, 1992 [Bodleian]. An ordinary of Tuscan arms; a second volume was promised. The introduction gives useful bibliographical notes on other sources for Tuscan heraldry. Generally see Fonti manoscritte inedite di Araldica, Istituto Genealogico Italiano, Florence 1961-84 [in PE library]

British Library:

See G. Gatfield, Guide to printed Books and Manuscripts relating to English and foreign Heraldry and Genealogy, London 1892. Also, in the Mss. Students' Room: Class Catalogue of Manuscripts (vol. 65D, Heraldry vol III, fol. 1377-97). Ann Payne in Dept. of Mss. was infinitely patient, but retired in 2001.

British Museum, Dept of Medieval and Later Antiquities:

A few rarities I have accumulated, noted above, passim.

V & A: National Art Library:

See Classed catalogue of printed books: Heraldry [BL 11926 s 8] (and earlier editions). This used to be one of the great heraldic libraries of the world, but has failed to buy too many things in recent years. Since the sadly premature death of Michael Holmes, the "herald" at the NAL is John Meriton Coast.

Paris, Bibliothèque nationale:

For heraldic mss, see J. Giacomotti, Catalogue des majoliques..., Paris 1974, p. xvi.

Rome, Biblioteca Nazionale:

A range of heraldry books on open shelves. The Biblioteca Hertziana is perhaps more convenient.

Vatican Library:

See C.A. Bertini, Codici vaticani riguardanti la storia nobiliare, Collegio Araldico, Rome 1906.

Rome, Biblioteca Casanatense:

A delightful scholarly library; it was in 1984 graced by the charming and helpful Dssa Quilici. See L.G. Moricca, "I manoscritti araldici della biblioteca casanatense", Rivista araldica, 1947-9. On the current programme of armorial research, see G. Zaffignani, D'oro, d'azzurro, e di rosso. Carlo Marozzi e la passione per l'araldica, Milan 2004, p. 34. See also now I. Ceccopieri and L. Gallombardo, I manoscritti araldici della biblioteca casanatense (Rome 2000) [Bodley R Cat 930].

Also now an online resource, described in 2011 as follows:

The Biblioteca Casanatense coat of arms database contains some 1,000 arms of owners and dedicatees found in manuscripts and incunabula in the Casanatense library. The database is particularly helpful for the identification of anonymous arms, thanks to the 'esperta' search option, by 'figure', 'smalti', and 'partizioni'.

See Santoro, "Gli stemmi della biblioteca trivulziana" in Archivum Heraldicum/Archives héraldiques suisses 62 (1948).

Florence:

The most comprehensive range of heraldry books is in the Kunsthistorisches Institut. See also L. Boccia et al., Il Museo Stibbert a Firenze, 4, Florence 1976.

Venice:

Doug Lewis recommends the Marciana, the Archivio di Stato, and the Museo Correr. I have never used them for heraldic research.

14. Heraldic institutions (not, I think open to the public):
